Old Ben Franklin Said

"A penny saved is a penny earned." Ben must have had the saving possibilities of such a store as this in mind when he spoke.

We carry the very best of everything in the grocery and fresh meat lines and only try to make a fair margin of profit.

On all ten cent package goods, we say you a penny. On fifteen cent package goods, we save you two cents. And so on, all through the line, we save you from ten per cent and up, just for the cash instead of credit. Isn't it worth ten per cent to you to pay cash? Of course it is!

For today we have an excellent assortment of green vegetables, fancy and staple groceries, and fresh meats. Phone us your wants.

Meeting Palmetto Chapter.

The regular May meeting of the Palmetto chapter was held yesterday afternoon with Mrs. W. A. Speer and Miss Eubank Taylor, at the home of the latter on Earle street.

Some time was spent discussing business after which a very interesting and enjoyable program was given. Three beautiful vocal solos, by Miss Mab Bonham, Mrs. W. J. Muldrow, and Mrs. James H. Craig, were charmingly rendered. Mrs. W. A. Speer read a very fine paper on the battle of Chancellorsville, and Miss Eliza Major gave a most interesting historical paper.

During the social half hour an ice cream was served.

Mrs. Patrick, An Attractive Visitor in Charleston.

Miss Linda Hoskins entertained at a delightful bridge luncheon at the home of Mrs. H. L. Adams on East Boulevard, Dilworth, yesterday morning from 11 to 1:30 o'clock in honor of Mrs. R. M. Brannon of New York, and Mrs. Carrie McCully Patrick of Anderson, S. C., the former a guest of her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth L. Brannon, at her home on Oakland Court, and the latter a guest of Mrs. H. L. Adams.

ceived as prizes hand-embroidered handkerchiefs, the dainty work of the hostess. Those playing were: Mrs. R. M. Brannon and Mrs. Carrie McCully Patrick and Mesdames Edward C. Marshall, F. D. Sampson, John F. Yorke, Robert A. Mayer, Robert M. Miller and Margaret Kelley Abernethy. In addition to those playing the guests at luncheon were Mrs. Elizabeth L. Bussey, Mrs. H. L. Adams, Mrs. J. D. Ball, Mrs. W. W. Bobards and Miss Hoskins. Mrs. Brannon was gown in light blue crepe and black meline hat trimmed in paradise. Mrs. Patrick wore brown taffeta with transparent yoke and sleeves.—Charlotte Observer.

Dixie Chapter.

A delightfully pleasant meeting of the Dixie chapter was held yesterday afternoon with Mrs. A. P. Johnstone at her home on River street.

The house was decorated with sweet peas and roses, and from a beautifully decorated table Mrs. J. D. Rast and Mrs. John C. Neely served delicious nectar.

There was a good attendance of members and the principal business for the afternoon was the election of officers, which resulted as follows: President Mrs. James R. Anderson, First Vice President Miss Nelle Cochran, Second Vice President Mrs. Daisy Wilson, Secretary Mrs. Phelps Sassen, Treasurer Miss Nelle Barton, Historian Mrs. Grace Cochran, Gleaner Mrs. A. P. Johnstone, Registrar Mrs. W. W. Russell, Auditor Mrs. Lottie Estes.

Miss Nelle Cochran the bright and efficient retiring president, gracefully thanked the ladies for their faithful cooperation and loyalty. After all business had been disposed of the following program was rendered: solo, Mrs. R. C. McDonald. The subject for the afternoon was South Carolina Heroines, and the first paper was on "Anne Kennedy," by Miss May Russell. This paper was splendid. Anne Kennedy being Miss Russell's great grand mother. Solo, Mrs. Charles Greene. Paper, "Emily Geiger," by Miss Maggie Garlington. The attractive hostess served an elegant salad course.

COMMUTE FRANK'S SENTENCE TO LIFE IMPRISONMENT

Justice, in determining, whether Frank shall be hanged or his sentence commuted to life imprisonment, they will determine issues of vast consequence to the reputation and the character of the State. The question is not merely whether one man shall live or die but whether the State of Georgia shall be true or false to the principles of justice and humanity.

The governor is empowered to meet just such emergencies as this. The makers of our law and constitution wisely foresaw that occasions might arise in which all ordinary legal processes would fail to establish the innocence of a person accused. They realized that times might come when a case, although settled so far as the courts were concerned, would involve questions of grave doubt. Therefore, they authorized the pardon board to recommend and the governor to grant a commutation of sentence in such circumstances.

Never was there a fairer demand for the righteous exercise of this power than in the pending case of Leo M. Frank. If he be guilty, he has not fairly been proved so. If he be innocent, his execution will amount morally to murder. It is not asked of the board and the governor that they declare him innocent, but only that they recognize, as did the trial judge, the serious doubt of his guilt and by commuting the death sentence to life imprisonment leave a chance for the future establishment of justice and truth.

This ought to be done, because it is reasonable and because it is right. It is well, moreover, in such an issue as this to take note of the country's sober opinion. Not only in Georgia but throughout the South and throughout the Union, thoughtful men are appealing individually and collectively for a commutation of Frank's sentence. No criminal case ever stirred the nation's conscience so deeply. Localities and groups are often moved by gusts of sentiment to intercede in a condemned prisoner's behalf, but that is not the source or character of this appeal. A few hundred or a few thousand impressionable persons here and there could be swayed by mere pity, but when hundreds of thousands of people in every part of the United States reach the same conclusion and urge the same request, we may be sure that they act upon a solemn conviction that terrible injustice is about to be done.

The press of the nation is virtually a unit in urging that Frank's sentence be commuted. Various legislatures, among them being those of Tennessee, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, have adopted resolutions to the same effect. Governors and other public officials have added their voice to nation-wide appeal. We know that the rank and file of the Atlanta bar are convinced that Frank's trial was unfair, and we believe that the rank and file of the entire Georgia bar are of the same opinion. With the utmost conservatism, we can go further and say that a great majority of the people of Georgia feel that Frank's guilt has not been proved beyond a reasonable doubt and that a great many of them consider him innocent.

These convictions and expressions are eminently worthy of consideration by the pardon board and the governor. But above all, the inner murmur of the case itself demands a commutation of the sentence. It has often been said that it were better for ninety-nine guilty men to escape than for one innocent man to be executed. But that is not precisely the issue at stake here. It is not a question of Frank's innocence or guilt, but simply a question of whether the State of Georgia should permit a man to escape from the gallows who has been convicted of murder. The answer to this question is a simple one. It is that no man should be permitted to escape from the gallows who has been convicted of murder.

OSTIA ONCE WAS BUSY CITY

Excavations of Roman Seaport Show Evidence of Its Former Commercial Importance.

"American in their straightness and regularity." Is one description of the streets of Ostia, the old port of Rome at the mouth of the Tiber, once a busy city, now dead and forgotten by all but the archeologists.

The place is, in its way, as interesting as Pompeii. The latter was an upper middle class watering place, while Herculaneum was a Roman Newport. But Ostia was an ordinary Roman business seaport and city, and the discoveries just made there enable one to reconstruct the life of a busy imperial center of 2,000 years ago.

The work that has been accomplished enables the visitor to realize as never before the life lived by the energetic commercial people who inhabited the seaport of the Eternal City, and gives a clear idea of the kind of town it was. There are traces of five or six bathing establishments in Ostia. The chief baths, which are to the north of the street called the Val del Vigili, with their large palaestra or place for exercise, take up a whole block, and there are to be found splendid mosaics of the second century, that representing Neptune driving four water horses being perhaps the finest of the kind known, while even the room which is supposed to have been the porter's lodge has a good mosaic pavement in an Egyptian design.

The shops, fountains and porticoes bordering the streets of old Ostia which have been brought to light in the recent excavations complete the picture and make us realize that life was not so very different in the far-away past from what it is today in many an Italian town.

KILLS BACILLUS OF TYPHOID

Vinegar Has Been Definitely Ascertained to Be a Destroyer of the Dangerous Germs.

Doctors Loir and Legagneux of Paris have been testing vinegar as a destroyer of the germs of typhoid fever. That they are killed by a mixture of wine and water in equal parts has long been known. These investigators prove now that 20 grams of vinegar to a liter of water kill the typhoid bacillus in an hour and five minutes.

"From this," writes the Paris correspondent of the Lancet, "a practical inference may be drawn concerning salads. After washing the salad as usual, detaching each leaf, it should be put into water acidulated with ten grams of vinegar to the liter and remain immersed in this liquid for about an hour and a quarter. All vegetables ordinarily eaten uncooked may be subjected without any inconvenience to the same process."

A liter is equivalent to about a quart, and ten grams are equivalent to about a third of an ounce. So, if lettuce or other greens for salad be placed in water to which about one-third of an ounce of vinegar has been added and be left for an hour and a quarter, all danger of typhoid fever will be removed.

Looking for Ancestors.

The Rambler is in receipt of a letter from a Washington lady asking information regarding the Newman and Alvey families of Prince Georges county, Md. She says: "I have been reading with much interest your articles in the Sunday Star, and as the account in today's pertains mostly to my native county, Prince Georges, I would ask you if in any of your rambles through that country you have chanced across any member of the Newman family."

She is in search of facts relating to Horatio Newman, who served in the War of 1812 and who has been dead about fifty years. She does not know in what part of Prince Georges he lived and owned land, or where he was born or where buried. There is a family tradition that his wife's name was Eliza Alvey and that she was an adopted daughter of a member of the Magruder family which lived near Oxon Hill.—Washington Star.

Collapsible Refrigerator.

One of the interesting features in a new refrigerator is that it can easily be taken apart for transportation or for cleaning, and then put together in a few minutes without the use of tools of any kind. The base, sides, front, back, and top form separate sections. These are connected by locking bars, having slots in the ends, which fit over pins projected from the parts to be connected and are so arranged that when the refrigerator is set up, these parts are held rigidly together. Another feature of this refrigerator is that of circulating the water formed by the melting ice through pipes under the shelves.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Primitive "Timepieces."

One of the most primitive time-recording devices employed by the Chinese and Japanese was a knotted wick about two feet in length which smoldered without breaking into flame, and indicated the passage of an hour by the time consumed in burning between two knots. King Ah-wei is credited with having created this device.
